STUDIES, TEXT BOOKS, &c.

This institution presents to those youths who may resort to it, an opportunity for studying the Greek, Latin, French, Spanish, German, Hebrew, and Italian Languages, the various branches embraced in English literature, the different Natural Sciences, Mathematics, Metaphysics, &c. &c.

Instruction is also give in Drawing, Painting, Drafting, Instrumental and Vocal Music. The design is to afford means for fitting students to enter College, or for giving those who do not take a collegiate course, a privilege of getting a thorough, practical education. The Institution takes rather a medium stand between a college and a common academy. Hence, several of the regular college studies, as well as the more common branches, are here pursued, giving good opportunities to all who wish, to fit themselves well for the great duties of life.

The following Books are used :—

GREEK.—Crosby's Greek Grammar, Anthon's Greek Reader, Crosby's Greek Lessons, Greek Testament, Xenophon's Anabasis, Crosby's Edition, Donnegan's Lexicon.

LATIN. Andrew's and Stoddard's Latin Grammar, Andrew's Latin Reader, Ainsworth's or Leverett's Dictionary, Cæsar's Commentaries, Anthon's Sallust, Anthon's Cicero, Virgil, (Cooper's,) Horace, Levi, Ovid, &c.

RHETORICAL EXERCISES, &c.—Besides a weekly Rhetorical Exercise, consisting of Composition and declamation, which is attended to every Wednesday, P. M., there are connected with the Institution various benevolent and literary societies designed to promote the moral, as well as intellectual welfare of the youths who may wish to enjoy their benefits. In addition to these, the Students have access to a Reading Room, where are received many of the most interesting periodicals of the day; and also to a Library, which contains an excellent selection of books.

MUSIC.

The Musical Department is now in very successful operation. Those who wish to obtain a thorough philosophical knowledge of Vocal and Instrumental Music on moderate terms, will find it for their interest to attend.

COURSE OF STUDY.

For the benefit of those who wish to obtain a thorough English education, the following course of study is adopted. Any however can take such parts as they may desire, if they do not wish to go through with the whole.

METHOD OF TEACHING.

In the various branches taught in the different departments of this Institution, the great object of the teachers is to lead their pupils to think for themselves, to understand clearly and thoroughly what they go over. They consider that what the students do attend to, they should investigate so as to comprehend it, even if their progress is apparently far less rapid. This is abundantly the best in the end.

BOARDING DEPARTMENT.

The design is to furnish good board, such as is best suited to persons engaged in study. Some of the teachers board in this department, at the same table with the students.

Those who choose can board in the village; but parents sending their children from abroad will find it for their interest, on some accounts, to have them board at the Seminary. Then they will be far more under the supervision of the teachers, who maintain a watchful care to keep good order, and are ever ready to render them what assistance they need in their studies.
